On the other hand, the number of non-native speakers of English is about two-thirds of the world's population in this sense. English is not originally spread all over the world. In fact, recognition of English as a global lingua franca began when the British Empire expanded its colonies in Africa, Asia, and the Americas. Today, English is spoken by over 1 billion people as a first language and by another billion as a second language.

The English language is widely spread in the world, with English being spoken as a first language in over 50 countries and as a second language in over 150 countries. In addition, English is the official language of many international organizations, including the United Nations, the International Olympic Committee, and the European Union. English is also the language of science, technology, and business, making it a vital component of the global economy.

Persian is another language of recent divine revelation, which Allah has called "a sweet perfume" (p. 160). The revelation of the Quran to Prophet Muhammad (peace be upon him) included the development of Arabic and Persian as distinct languages. Arabic is the language of the Quran, and Persian is the language of the Shahnameh, a collection of ancient Persian literature.

In this table [Naf'han-ut Qadha', pp. 2-8], Bahá'ís discuss the Arabic language, which is the language of the Quran and the language of the Arabic-influenced Islamic world. This language has been a powerful tool for the expression of Islamic thought and has been used to convey the messages of the Quran and the Hadith. In contrast, the Persian language has been used to convey the teachings of the Bahá'í Faith, which is a Persian-influenced religion.

During the 19th and 20th centuries, Shoghi Effendi, the Guardian of the Bahá'í Faith, once wrote to the Universal House of Justice member of Justice in regards to Arabic, Persian, and the Universal House of Justice member of Justice in regards to Arabic. He wrote that the Arabic language was the language of the Quran and the Persian language was the language of the Bahá'í Faith. He emphasized the importance of the Arabic and Persian languages in the promotion of the teachings of the Bahá'í Faith.
I.3 Implications

The world of international business is one where English is used almost universally. The dominance of English is so widespread that other languages are becoming international languages. The spread of English is due to its status as a universal language, and the fact that it is the language of international organizations, such as the United Nations. However, there are also other reasons for the dominance of English, such as its position as a major trade language and its role in the spread of US cultural and economic influence.

One of the most important implications of this is that English is becoming a global language. This means that it is becoming more than just a language used in international business. It is also being used in everyday life, such as in international education and in the media.

Abandonment of the mother tongue does not seem to fit into the framework of Baha'u'llah's teachings. However, the imposition of one universal language upon the peoples of the world and the recognition of the convenience of a monolingual world in the above passage, Baha'u'llah recognizes the convenience of a multilingual world.

We have formerly advocated that people should converse in two languages, yet efforts were made to reduce them to one, however the slips of the tongue, that men is whole earth would come to be regarded as one city and one land, Baha'u'llah, Table 1, Bahá'u'lláh speaks about one common language to be spoken all over the world:

In order to discuss the timing of the adoption of the international language, we need to talk about the distinction between an auxiliary language and a global language.

When Will a Universal Language Be Adopted?

"Future, while the latter is likely to take place later process of adopting the universal language. The former may take place in the relatively near world and the other to the Universal House of Justice—may refer to the two stages of the world. These two stages of actions—one, referring to the matter of the governments of the world, the other the majority of the Universal House of Justice is widely recognized."

Since the application of Baha'I teachings on the part of the society, this law may need to wait until the acceptance of the Baha'I teachings on the part of society depends upon the Conte is English. Have any invention to register on this matter, the common language used at the Panama World as well. Although the Universal House of Justice has not legislated or does not even seem to be unparceled in human history. The trend is rather confirmed within the larger community and the expanding circle is ever expanding. There lies the significance and the trend is of its existing, mainly politics, economy, science and education. With its inner, outer and global languages, this is a language that has substantial influence on the world. English can truly be called a "global language". According to Crystal (1997, 2003), English can only be called a "global language".

Japanese and English were both taught dual language programs in schools, but based on student performance, English was more favored and desired. In the academic environment, English is viewed more favorably and important than Japanese. In a report of communication in the real world, students are opposed to the academic environment.

This is not to say that students have a negative view of English, as it is a different language. However, students prefer English when it comes to school subjects, and within the school, English is more preferred.

In a survey conducted by the Ministry of Education, students were asked whether they were satisfied with their English proficiency. The results showed that students were generally satisfied with their ability to speak and understand English.

In 2000, the author conducted a study on language attitudes in college students in Japan.
Students can actually communicate in English because despite a general belief that Japanese oral proficiency in English is very poor, these English speakers may have difficulty understanding their Japanese. Although they speak a lot of English with Japanese English can easily follow their conversations. Although this type of English may not be the typical English they speak at home, they can actually communicate many things about their daily lives. The English they use is typical Japanese English. While native English speakers may have difficulty understanding their English, anyone who is somewhat fluent in English's proper level is very high and they can actually communicate many things about their daily lives. Although they make many grammatical mistakes and use significant amount of English, they are capable of communicating a lot of things in English and Japanese. The result of this approach has been simply overwhelming. The students in this course have made significant progress in their English skills and are able to communicate effectively in both English and their native language.

The phonogram of varieties of English or world Englishes can also be observed in the following chart.

The world is apparently moving towards bilingualism. At the same time, the force of its opposition is also at work. Whether we wish to promote bilingualism or to withstand the force of the coming age of bilingualism.

Likely to make that choice on its own, rather than having the choice be imposed by force. In the future, the significance of language, culture, and identity will rise in the global order. Language, culture, and identity will rise in the global order.

Language is a wealth of knowledge, values, and culture. This is a matter of human identity, diversity of human knowledge, values, and culture. This is a matter of human identity, diversity of human knowledge, values, and culture.

In Chapter 11 of Genesis, it is written:

3:7. The Tower of Babel

Educational reform is called for so that bilingual education will be effectively carried out. In this sense, further research and understanding need to be addressed and explained in educational and social sciences. Such misunderstandings need to be addressed and explained in educational and social sciences.

A common myth is that bilinguals are confused linguistically. And this is where languages are spoken. In these cases, one language may become stronger and the other weaker. In others, a language may be lost and forgotten, and many of many not come back as a whole. This is a loss of cultural identity. The reality is that the above-mentioned degrees of bilingualism are common. Many people believe that bilinguals, once educated, remain the same.

Languages. Bilinguals and not all bilinguals can perform various types of activities equally in both languages. For bilinguals, the languages are necessarily based on situations and cultural contexts. Bilingualism is a loose one, and differing views of the same.

Finally, Webster’s definition (1961) is, “having or using two languages, especially as spoken with the native characteristic of a native speaker; a person using two languages especially as spoken with the native characteristic of a native speaker.” Webster’s definition depends on the definition of bilingualism. For example, bilingualism is defined as (1961) "being able to speak and write in one or more of two languages." However, this definition of the myth is that bilinguals can do anything in two languages. However, oppositional forces need to dispel some major misunderstandings about bilingualism.
The story is continued by the narrator, with a theme of change and progress.

Modification is also taking place in non-English native speaking countries and its overreach.

Internationalization is already a vital world force spreading the language. At the same time, its optimization moment is officially pronounced, as the international language for the global business and universities is expanding. The language barrier is threatening the global interaction issue. This is an urgent problem that we need to address. The result of these two factors is that there are now two possibilities towards the future of the international language: English or another language.

The choice between these two possibilities is multi-dimensional. First, the current scenario on the international language issue is multi-dimensional. Second, the role of English is multi-dimensional. The rise of English is not only due to its status as a global language, but also due to its economic and cultural significance. However, the impact of English on the global community is not limited to these two factors. There are other factors such as politics and culture that also contribute to its rise.

Conclusion

The Bat's perspective on the international language issue is multi-dimensional. It is not possible to choose one language over another. The diversity of languages is essential for the development of human society. It is not possible to reduce the diversity of language to a single language. The world is complex, and we need to respect and appreciate the diversity of languages.

The story of the tower is not just about the construction of a tower. It is also a story about the diversity of languages and the importance of maintaining cultural diversity. The Bat's perspective on the international language issue is multi-dimensional. The rise of English is not only due to its status as a global language, but also due to its economic and cultural significance. However, the impact of English on the global community is not limited to these two factors. There are other factors such as politics and culture that also contribute to its rise.
Today the greatest need of the world of humanity is dissemination of the existing Tower of Babel. Therefore the future of human prosperity will be a bright one.
